

Thanksgiving in America 2024: Social devastation for the working class, billions more for the oligarchs

On Thanksgiving Day 2024, the broad mass of the American population has precious little to be thankful for. Inflated costs for all necessities—housing, food, healthcare, childcare, transport—continue to weigh on working class families. Workers are struggling to scrape together turkey dinners for their families and friends under conditions where the cost of a Thanksgiving meal is up 19 percent from pre-pandemic 2019, according to the American Farm Bureau Federation.

But there is an entirely different reality in the environs of the rich and the super-rich. Champagne glasses are clinking on Wall Street, at Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago estate, at the White House and on Capitol Hill as the stock market booms and the bonanza reaped by America's oligarchs and their political servants under Joe Biden is set to be massively amplified under the incoming Trump administration.

Outgoing President Biden is spending his holiday at the Nantucket home of David Rubenstein, billionaire co-founder of the Carlyle Group. Defeated presidential candidate Kamala Harris is sunning herself in Hawaii. Most of their voters, and most of Trump's, are struggling simply to get by.

The ranks of America's billionaires grew to 800 under Biden and their collective wealth increased by 62 percent to more than $6.2 trillion (not counting the additional hundreds of billions amassed in the stock market surge since the election of Trump). As of December of last year, the top 1 percent of Americans took 21 percent of all personal incomes, more than double the share of the bottom 50 percent. The top one percent of Americans owned 35 percent of all personal wealth and the top 10 percent owned 71 percent, while the bottom 50 percent owned just 1 percent.

In less than eight weeks, Trump's cabal of billionaires, fascists and quacks is set to take office. It will seek to impose an agenda of mass deportations and state repression, escalation of war and genocide, further tax cuts for the rich, the ripping up of what remains of the social safety net, the dismantling of public health and public education, and the lifting of virtually all regulations on big business. Things could not appear rosier for the financial parasites who control both parties and the entire political system.

Elon Musk, Trump's crony and the richest man in the world, with a fortune of $300 billion and counting, will be joined by fellow billionaire Vivek Ramaswamy at the head of Trump's new Department of Government Efficiency, where they plan to cut the federal budget by $2 trillion. This will mean the gutting of Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security and the firing of hundreds of thousands of government workers.

This is on top of an already unfolding social disaster for the masses. Almost 40 percent of Americans, in a survey by the Harris Poll for Bloomberg News in December of 2023, said their household recently relied on extra money besides their regular income to make ends meet. Of those, 38 percent said the additional amounts barely covered their monthly expenses with nothing left over, and 23 percent said it wasn't enough to pay their bills.

Since last December, mass layoffs in auto, aerospace, retail and other sectors have continued to spread, further devastating working class families. These conditions have already sparked a wave of strikes—at Boeing, on the docks, in the auto sector—in which workers rebelled against the union bureaucrats and voted down sellout contracts.

Here are some key indices of the social reality confronting broad layers of the American people on Thanksgiving Day:

Hunger

- According to the most recent Census Bureau Household Pulse Survey (October 2023), one out of every eight American adults is struggling to afford enough food. Nearly 28 million adults nationwide—12.5 percent of the adult population—are living in homes where there is either sometimes or often not enough to eat. This is the highest that figure has reached since the first year of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Homelessness

- The “State of Homelessness” document of the National Alliance to End Homelessness, 2024 edition, reports:
 - In 2023, the year-over-year increase in the number of people experiencing homelessness was 12.1 percent, the biggest increase since data collection began in 2007.

- From 2022 to 2023, homelessness for entire families increased by 15.5 percent.

- More people than ever are experiencing homelessness for the first time. From 2019 to 2023, the number of people who entered emergency shelter for the first time increased more than 23 percent. Over the course of 2023, nearly one million people experienced homelessness for the first time.

- Severe housing cost burdens are on the rise. The number of renter households paying more than 50 percent of their income on rent increased dramatically, rising over 12.6 percent between 2015 and 2022.

- More than half of people experiencing sheltered homelessness, and slightly less than half of people experiencing unsheltered homelessness are formally employed.

Poverty

- According to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), the United States has the highest poverty rate among the world's 26 most developed countries. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) ranks the United States second behind Mexico on a scale of what economists call "relative child poverty" when measured against 35 of the world's richest nations.

- In 2023, the official US poverty rate, according to the United States Census Bureau, was 11.1 percent. There were 36.8 million people in poverty in 2023.

Life expectancy

- Overall life expectancy in the US was 76.4 years as of early 2023, the lowest in over 20 years.

How is this possible in the richest country in the world? The answer is capitalism. This is a system in which the working class, which produces all of the wealth, is systematically robbed of the vast portion of what it produces on the basis of private ownership of the means of production, production for profit, and the historically outmoded nation-state framework of economic life.

The levels of oligarchic excess and parasitism in the US are particularly grotesque due to the complete political subordination of the working class to the ruling elite by means of the two-party system. The exclusion of the working class from political life is enforced by the union bureaucracy and its pseudo-left hangers on in such pro-Democratic groups as the Democratic Socialists of America (DSA).

This is reflected in such facts as a federal minimum wage that remains at $7.25, not even sufficient to sustain human life. Meanwhile, the two-party monopoly spends a trillion dollars a year on war and the military and a trillion a year to service a national debt of $34 trillion and rising. The latter payouts, which directly enrich the banks and hedge funds, are on top of a combined $12 trillion doled out to rescue the financial elite in the Wall Street crises of 2008 and 2020.

The millions of workers who voted for Trump did so as a protest against the undisguised indifference of Biden and Harris to the devastating impact of inflation and austerity, including the purging of 40 million people from the Medicaid rolls. They did not vote for dictatorship, the rounding up of immigrant workers in concentration camps policed by the military for summary deportation, the expansion of US imperialism's global war to China, and an increase in Washington's support for the genocide in Gaza, or the destruction of millions more jobs and basic social services.

They will be stunned and enraged by what is coming under Trump, and they will resist, massively and on a revolutionary scale. Leon Trotsky in his monumental History of the Russian Revolution devoted a chapter to "The Tzar and the Tzarina," in which he wrote of the cognitive blindness that seems to possess ruling classes on the eve of revolutionary upheavals. He wrote:

To that historic flood which was rolling its billows each one closer to the gates of his palace, the last Romanov opposed only a dumb indifference. It seemed as though between his consciousness and his epoch there stood some transparent but absolutely impenetrable medium.

The tzar had no need of narcotics: the fatal "dope" was in his blood. Its symptoms merely seemed especially striking on the background of those great events of war and domestic crisis which led up to the revolution.

The American ruling class is facing a historical reckoning. The social force that alone can stop and reverse the slide to fascism and world war is the working class, in the US and internationally. It will fight, but it requires a scientific Marxist and internationalist perspective and strategy and the building of a new leadership, which can be accomplished only by the Trotskyist movement, the Socialist Equality Party and the International Committee of the Fourth International. To all those who see the dangers and want to fight, we say join the SEP and take up the fight for the political independence of the working class and socialism!
